

10th Annual Meeting
Saturday, June 13, 2009

at

The City College of New York
Shepard Hall, Room 250

Program

Come celebrate with us!

Andrew Fitz-Gibbon is professor of philosophy at SUNY Cortland (Cortland, NY), and Director of its Center for Ethics, Peace and Social Justice (CEPS). He is also an APPA-Certified Philosophical Counselor who, along with colleague Kathy Russell (see below) recently established an IRB-approved research protocol for philosophical counseling at SUNY Cortland.

Pierre Grimes is the doyen of contemporary philosophical practitioners, having been continuously in practice since the 1960s. He is the leading exponent of Socratic Midwifery. Pierre is also an author and playwright, a Director of APPA, and founder of Opening Mind Academy in Orange County, California. He has practiced philosophy all over the world.

Michael Grosso is eclectic professor emeritus and former chair of philosophy of Jersey City University. His philosophical and literary interests are diverse. He is currently with the Division of Perceptual Studies at the University of Virginia. Michael is a scholar, author, practitioner, painter, and a Director of APPA. He was the first Reviews Editor of APPA's Journal.

Lou Marinoff is professor and deputy chair of philosophy at The City College of New York. He is past president of the ASPCP (1997), and founding president of the APPA (1999). He is also founding editor-in-chief of APPA's Journal. An author and a pioneer, he practices philosophy worldwide.

Kathy Russell is professor and chair of philosophy at SUNY Cortland. She and Andrew Fitz-Gibbon received media attention for their IRB initiative, which resulted in numerous clients presenting themselves as research subjects for philosophical counseling. Cortland's philosophy department will host a Level II APPA program in philosophical counseling this August 2009.

Lauren Tillinghast is an APPA-Certified Philosophical Counselor with a private practice in Manhattan. She recently pioneered a continuing education course in philosophy for everyday life at New York University. In addition, Lauren is Managing Editor of APPA's Journal, Philosophical Practice.